"That Rock Was Christ"

Our lesson this morning is from Matthew 5:17-18 in which Jesus describes himself as the fulfillment of the old law.

God had planned on sending Jesus as the savior of sinful humanity from before creation (1 Pet. 1:20), and he gave portraits of the coming Christ to Israel in their law by both prophecies and types. A type is an Old Testament person, place, thing or event that pictures beforehand the person and/or work of Jesus.

One interesting type that Paul speaks of was the rock from which God gave Israel water during their wilderness wanderings (1 Cor. 10:4). Twice--once in the first year of wandering and once in the fortieth year of wandering--God is said to have provided Israel water from rocks when Moses struck them (Exod. 17:1-7; Num. 20:1-13).

Interestingly enough God commanded Moses to strike the first rock with his staff (Exod. 17:5-6), but he only ordered him to speak to the second rock with staff in hand (Num. 20:8). When Moses struck the second rock, even though water gushed forth, God rebuked Moses and on that account punished him by not allowing him to enter the Promised Land (Num. 20:12).

Why would God condemn Moses for doing the very thing that he approved of forty years before? I think that part of the answer lies in the nature of the rocks. Though it seems clear that these were two different rocks, Paul interprets them as one rock that typified Jesus. Jesus provided the water of life (John 4:13-14) to his people when Israel struck him in the crucifixion (Acts 13:27; Matt. 26:31). The Hebrews writer makes much of the fact that Jesus was struck once for all time (Heb. 7:27; 9:28). After Jesus was struck that one time he provides water to any who call upon him (Rom. 10:13); he doesn't have to be struck a second time. Thus Moses was condemned because he broke the type--he obscured the picture of Jesus--by striking the rock a second time.

Jesus said, "You study the Scriptures diligently because you think that in them you have eternal life. These are the very Scriptures that testify about me" (John 5:39 NIV).
