STYROFOAM CAKE

Marsy Flores of Pasadena, Texas, ordered a cake from her local Walmart to celebrate her daughter's graduation from high school. When she went to pick up the cake from Walmart, the store seemed to have lost her order. The store manager told her that she could pick any one of the cakes that were already prepared. After Flores chose one of the cakes, a bakery worker added a cap-and-gown picture to it.

Flores took the cake to her daughter's graduation party. However, when she cut the cake that she got from Walmart, she found that it wasn't a cake at all. It was a model of a cake made out of Styrofoam! She took the cake back, and Walmart offered Flores a $60 gift card. Walmart offered the following comment about the incident: "This was the result of a misunderstanding."

Flores was upset that Walmart had sold her a Styrofoam cake, and she had every right to be. She said, "This is my baby, and she was graduating, so it was very important to me." However, worse than being sold a Styrofoam cake for your daughter's graduation party is being sold a Styrofoam cake in religion.

There were false prophets in Jeremiah's day who made a living telling the people what they wanted to hear rather than what God had said. God was going to destroy the temple because of Judah's sin, but prophets like Hananiah said that destruction wouldn't come and that "within two years [God would] bring back to [the temple] all the articles...that Nebuchadnezzar...removed...and took to Babylon" (Jer. 28:3 NIV). Jeremiah responded, "Listen, Hananiah! The Lord has not sent you, yet you have persuaded this nation to trust in lies" (v. 15 NIV).

Just because something looks like a cake doesn't mean that it is. It might be a Styrofoam model. And just because a religion claims to be from God doesn't mean that it is. It might be spiritual Styrofoam. You need to cut the cake. "Test everything; hold fast what is good" (1 Thess. 5:21 ESV).
